

Letter to Miss Emily Hobhouse

5th January, 1914

Dear Miss Hobhouse,

It was a perfect pleasure to have received your very kind and generous letter.

Had I known how to approach you before, I would undoubtedly have endeavoured to enlist your large heart in our behalf.

It was during the Boer war that I came to admire your selfless devotion to Truth, and I have often felt how nice it would be if the Indian cause could plead before you for admission; and it is evident to me that your first telegram uttering a note of warning was an answer to that yearning.

I am loath to write to you on this question, as Miss Molteno has told me how feeble you are now in health. She was good enough to read to me a part of Miss Greene's letter, telling her in most pathetic tones how it was the duty of those who loved you to refrain from imposing fresh burdens on you.

I am, therefore, torn by conflicting emotions. But, as Miss Molteno, who knows you better assures me that to expect you now not to interest yourself in our cause is to misjudge you and to aggravate your illness, because you would, she says, fret about us without being enabled by us to render your assistance effective.

If your health permits and if the climate on the North Coast of Natal would not be too trying for you, I would esteem it a privilege if you could take rest on the little settlement at Phoenix where Indian Opinion is published.

Miss Molteno knows the settlement well. It is situated about eighty feet above sea-level and is exposed to certain winds which sweep across the hills that overlook the settlement and purify the atmosphere.

The scenery around is certainly very charming, the site is beautifully isolated, there is no bustle or noise, it is two miles from the nearest station and I venture to think that you will find loving hands to administer to your wants, and nothing would give me personally greater pleasure than, if I were free, to be able to wait upon you and nurse you.

You will, I hope, consider this offer as coming from the heart without the slightest hesitation accept it if you can.

I will not weary you with copies of correspondence and details about the question. I enclose the telegrams exchanged between General Smuts and myself, which speak for themselves.

We have always accepted what we could get in matters of details, but, in this matter of the Commission, we are solemnly bound to sacrifice ourselves for the principle of consultation.

In striving to secure this recognition of an elementary right, if we must, for the time being, forfeit public sympathy, we must be prepared to do so.

Knowing that the truth is on our side, past experience will enable us to have patience, and, as days go on, the mists of ignorance will be removed, the cloud will lift and I have no doubt that Truth will conquer.

What we have asked for is the smallest measure and, if the Government obstinately refuses to grant that measure of justice, surely it will be an indication of their disinclination to recognise the status of British Indians throughout the Union.

Indeed, through my twenty years' experience, I have been able to gather many an indication of the same spirit and it is really against that that we are fighting.

In those matters to which Passive Resistance is directed, I hold there can be no compromise. Could Daniel have compromised by bowing to one of the laws of the Medes and Persians and not to others, or would the whole body of those laws have represented the influence of Satan and, therefore, been unacceptable in toto?

The last paragraph of your letter seems to assume that we are following the tactics of the high-souled militants of England.

May I say that we have not only not copied them, but, wherever it has been necessary, I have drawn a sharp distinction between their methods and ours.

Indeed, I used to have long discussions with the followers of the great Mrs Pankhurst on this very question.

At no stage, do we believe in the use of physical force, but I am free to confess that we have certainly been encouraged, in the hour of our weakness, by the noble example of devotion to duty and self-sacrifice that the militants have set, though we condemn their methods and tactics as suicidal and beneath the dignity of woman.

I hope that God will restore you to health and spare you for many a long year to continue your noble and unassuming work in the cause of Humanity.

I am,
Yours truly

Letters to Elizabeth M. Molteno

Phoenix
19th May 1914

Dear Miss Molteno,
I know that I owe you a letter. But since leaving Cape Town I have passed through so many trials that I have not had the time or the inclination to write really to anybody.

Mrs Gandhi had a very serious relapse and she absorbed all my time. Then followed a disciplinary fast of 14 days - the severest trial of my life. The fast was broken on Saturday last and I am feeling much better today. Mrs Gandhi too has responded to the careful nursing and today for the first time after my return to Phoenix I am at the Press working at the desk having just left Mrs Gandhi to her household work.

I had a very sweet letter from Miss Hobhouse this week. I am not replying just yet but may do so next week.

Mrs Gandhi often recalls your love to her and thinks of the kind friends in Cape Town.

Manilal is still in Johannesburg with Mr Kallenbach.

With our united regards to both of you

Dear Miss Molteno,
I have your two letters. I am sorry we were not able to meet to say goodbye to one another. Mrs Gandhi and I cannot forget the affection you and Miss Greene showed us during our stay in Cape Town. May God reward you for it.

Do please write to me occasionally. My address will be Rajkot via Bombay.

With our united regards to you both.

Yours sincerely
M.K. Gandhi

Dear Miss Molteno,

My impression is that I said we would call on you tomorrow (Tuesday), but Dr Gool does not remember. Not to make any mistake we shall be coming there between 3 and 4 tomorrow and take our chance.

The visit to Miss Hobhouse was entirely successful. It was a perfect pilgrimage for me. Mrs Botha was all you described her. She was most kind to both of us and most loving towards Mrs Gandhi. Thank you for all this. Incidentally we met Lady Gladstone too... Are you not pleased?

With our regards to you and Miss Greene

I remain
Yours sincerely

Dear Miss Molteno,

I am sorry to have to inform you that Mrs Gandhi has had a relapse and she is at the time of writing lying in bed. She wants me therefore to say that whilst she would try her best to keep the appointment for tomorrow, she might not be able to go out at all.

I thought that I should let you know this. In any case I shall expect you tomorrow afternoon and we shall be able to discuss. If she is very ill I would also have to remain in to be by her side. It is a great pity events have turned out so. But man proposes?

I am
Yours sincerely

My dear Mr Gandhi

I have at last got your address from the Steamship's Company. I want much to see you. Could you and Mr Kallenbach perhaps come and see me here, or could I meet you anywhere. I was struck to the heart this morning with sorrow to see that you, and that beautiful and beloved Indian poetess whom I met in London some months ago and other Indian friends had offered to serve the English Government in this evil war in any way they might demand of you.

Surely you, who would not take up arms even in the cause of your own oppressed people cannot be willing to shed blood in this wicked cause. I had longed to meet you and Mr Kallenbach as friends who would understand my hatred of it. I don't believe the statement in the paper can be true.

Yours very sincerely
Olive Schreiner
